Instructions

There are 2 bingo cards per page, for a total of 26 original cards. Print on card stock and cut apart. Laminate if you wish. I like to print mine on different coloured sheets so students can more easily identify which cards they may have already played.

There is one calling card mat for the caller to place the blends he or she has already called on. Calling cards can get printed on card stock, cut apart and laminated as well. Calling cards consist of 28 common consonant blends (all are initial blends, with the exception of "ck"). When the caller holds up a blend, students look for a word on their card that includes that blend. If there is more than one word on the card containing the blend, they may cover up all of them.

Bingo is an easy game for students to play, and is a fun way to get them reading independently. It can be used as a literacy centre, a whole class activity, and is great to leave for a supply teacher!

Large Style Bingo Cards

If playing with a large group, or the whole class, you may wish to use these larger cards to make it easier to see. These cards may be easier for younger children to handle.

Blends are the same, only in larger format
