Internet Safety Night for Parents

Do you wonder what your children do online? Do you understand social networking sites such as Facebook and My Space, and online interactive gaming sites? Would you like to obtain more information on the potential dangers of the Internet?

Communication is an effective tool for parents and guardians when helping their children avoid the dangers that exist on the Internet. The best way to keep your children safe on the Internet is to be educated. On Wednesday, March 24th, we will be hosting a free Internet Safety Night for Parents and Guardians at the Wood School Cafetorium, presented by the office of Norfolk District Attorney William R. Keating. Topics include responsible computer use, online dangers, social networking sites, chat rooms, Internet games, cyberbullying and more. Please note: No one under 18 is allowed.
